

Contributors to this Issue

PAULINE HOPE CHEONG is a PhD Candidate at the Annenberg School for Communication, University of Southern California.

PAUL K. COUCHMAN is an Associate Professor and Director of Postgraduate Programs in the School of Management, Marketing and Employment Relations at the University of Wollongong, New South Wales, Australia.

STUART CUNNINGHAM is Professor and Director of the Creative Industries Research and Applications Center, Queensland University of Technology, Brisbane, Australia.

WILLIAM H. DUTTON is Director of the Oxford Internet Institute, University of Oxford, where is he Professor of Internet Studies and a Fellow at Balliol College.

LIZ FULOP is Professor and Associate Dean of Research and Research Training in the Griffith Business School, Gold Coast Campus, Griffith University, Queensland, Australia.

CHRYIS GUNASEKARA is a lecturer in management in the Queensland University of Technology, School of Management.

GREG HEARN is Professor and Research and Development Co-ordinator, Creative Industries Faculty, Queensland University of Technology, Brisbane, Australia.

JACQUELINE KAM is a tutor currently completing her PhD at the Management School in the University of Sheffield, England.

DIEGO ORDOÑEZ is an investment banker and consultant to the Columbian Government on creative entrepreneurship.

NAMKEE PARK is a PhD Candidate at the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Southern California.

