

Contributors to this Issue

PETER CLARK is Professor of Organization Theory at Queen Mary, University of London.

ARTHUR M. DIAMOND, JR is Lucas Professor, Department of Economics, College of Business Administration, University of Nebraska Omaha.

WILLIAM H. DUTTON is Director of the Oxford Internet Institute at the University of Oxford, where he is Professor of Internet Studies, and a Fellow of Balliol College.

DARRELL LEWIS is Research Fellow, Centre for Historical Research at the National Museum of Australia.

TIM RAY works on knowledge and innovation at the UK's Open University Business School. Before joining the Open University in 1999, he spent seven years working in Japan for Japanese organizations. His earlier experience includes positions at the University of Manchester and Manchester Metropolitan University.