HUMAN SYSTEMS MANAGEMENT

HSM is a refereed international journal devoted to the theoretical and practical enhancement of a management paradigm suitable for the emerging era of knowledge integration and global competitiveness. Its target audience is an emerging community of international management: managers, executives, educators and researchers interested in the practical and theoretical enhancement of the management paradigm rooted in the thoughts of Juran, Deming, Ishikawa, Tribus, Bat'a, Lincoln, Jones and many others.

HSM has assembled a broadly knowledgeable and fully committed international Editorial Board of high expertise and visibility. It includes representatives from North America, Europe, Japan and Australia; people with interests ranging from DSS/AI/CAD/CAM technologies to those experienced in applying the TOS/JIT/IPM philosophies of management.

HSM Editors accept papers related to the enhancement of the above outlined paradigm of management: substantial ideas, theories, experience and cases are to be written in generally accessible, non-redundant and lively style, with non-essential supportive mathematics and statistics separated in the Appendix or referred to a specialized technical journal.

Management issues of productivity, quality, co-management, co-ownership, just-in-time, global competition, innovation, entrepreneurship, management support systems, computer integration, office automation, telecommunications, robotics, expert systems and artificial intelligence are just a few examples of HSM-related sub-areas submissions.
